When you've got a legacy stretching back more than a quarter century, it shows you've been paying attention. Anchor Audio's commitment to quality, reliability and innovation continues today in every product we make. The U.S. military, fire and law enforcement agencies, schools, universities, houses of worship and corporate presenters all rely on Anchor Audio sound systems to command the attention they deserve. At Anchor Audio, we never mince our words, or yours.

Anchor Audio has a portable sound system for any situation or event – small crowds or large, music or speech, indoors or out. We design our sound systems to be easy to use because our customers are usually NOT sound engineers, and we make them extremely rugged because we know how portable sound equipment gets kicked around. But while we design our systems to be versatile, tough and even stylish, we always make sure they deliver the clearest sound reproduction possible. Because in the end, the most important part of a sound system is the sound.

We manufacture four major product categories of audio equipment: speech and music systems which provide the most versatility, public address systems which are optimized for clear speech projection, lecterns which give the presentation a more elegant, sophisticated image, and intercom systems which provide a clear two-channel communication link for up to 20 people. Options such as battery or A/C power, wired or wireless microphones, handheld or hands-free microphones and CD or cassette player allow the Anchor Audio sound system to be perfect for almost any event or venue.

Anchor Audio's prominent users demonstrate our history of quality and reliability. They include: The White House, FBI, Navy SEALs, The Supreme Court, Harvard, Princeton & Yale, Marriott, Hyatt & Hilton hotels, and thousands of schools, churches and park & recreation departments around the world.

We have built a company on a solid reputation of 25 years, providing the most reliable, uncomplicated portable sound systems at great prices. We look forward to helping you deliver your message.
